LONDON, 9th March. The suit which Sir William Eden has brought against Mr. Whiatler in Paris to compel the ariset to deliver a portrait which he agreed to paint of Lady Eden has developed one of those pretty quarrels in which the combatants always make ridiculous speciacles of themselves. While the Court is trying to adjudicate in Paris, Mr. Whistler and the members of the Eden family are abusing each other with frontic passion in the columns of the Pall Mall Gasette.

The facts are simple. The arrangement Mr. Whistler to paint the lady's portrait was made through a third person, and there was some dispute about the price. Sir William sent 100 guineas. The artist cousid red himself insulted. returned the money, painted out the face on the convas and substituted another. The French court beard the evidence and will decide the matter perl week. The newspiper aspect of the aquable is more interesting. Mr. Whistler first wrote a flippant. sarcustic correction of the report of the trial whereupon a member of the Eden family replied: " For valgarity, insolence and powardice combined. Mr. Whistler's letter is hard to best." . He then proceeds to compare the artist, whom he describes as "a tradesman," with a tai'or who failed to deliver a pair of trousers which had been ordered and paid for. Mr Whistler sweetly reforts to day that "It is corrious and it an quebristian way pleasant to note how this Merenas, who through life surely mever gave away anything, now nobesitatingly defendant was committed for trial. The case was put in a new aspect after adjournment, first by Lord Alfred Douglas, the second son of the Marquis of Queensbarry, who called at several news agencies to say there was not the slightest truth in his father's allegations against Mr. Wilde and himself, "My father," he said, "is a madman. All the family are against him in this matter. My elder brother and I drove with Mr. Wilde to court to-day, and we shall do everything in our power to vindicate him from my father's charges.

Lord Alfred is a sallow, weak, lank individual, who looks as though he had exhausted all there is in life. He is 25 years old, but appears to be ten years older.

A little later in the afternoon Lord Douglas of Hawick, the oldest surviving son of the Marquis of Queensberry, made an even more damag. and statement against his father. He said he was just home from Australia, and he had assured bimself there was no truth in his father's charges, My father has been a brute to his family." 2s. 9d.
